

Money symbols do not exist in space and time !

All the money symbols on this planet are really ‘names’ and ‘mental symbols’. This goes for the $ (dollar), the ruble, the peso, the lira, the krona, the yen, the won, the renminbi, the pound, and all the other money symbols currently in use. All are derived from the consciousness (spirit) of human beings. These ‘symbols’ and ‘names’ are not composed of matter and/or energy. In reality they derive from our spirit within (consciousness). The imprinting of symbols on paper gives the illusion that money is physical. But, in reality, we are all deluded when we believe this myth. Money, in reality, is derived from our inner spirit consciousness.

What about gold, silver, paper, and electronic symbols? These commodities and electronic waves are composed of matter and/or energy and derive from resources within or on our planet or the greater universe. However, all the money ‘symbols’ and ‘names’ which we imprint on gold coins, silver coins, paper notes, and input into our electronic computers are derived from the realm of our consciousness (spirit). Human beings on this planet (currently the policymakers at the Central Banks) create these ‘symbols’ and ‘names’ from their consciousness. They then choose the matter/energy item to use for distribution of these ‘symbols’. That is my view of reality. What does this mean? To me this means that eventually...at some future time...and not that distant from today...all the stock markets on this planet will go to zero. Why? Simply because (in reality) these ‘symbols’ do not exist in space and time. They are ‘imaginary’ and are derived from our inner spirit being. The real issue today is not an issue of science (matter and energy) but a deeper issue which is spiritual in nature. And this issue will eventually be revealed as we experience the gradual collapse of our world economic ‘symbol’ system. Most current philosophers and scientists have the view that all reality is derived from matter and/or energy. The realm of the spirit is dismissed as an illusion or delusion. However, I would suggest that this is an error in perception. Reality actually involves two realms. That which we view as objective (things)...and that which we derive from our subjective consciousness (no things). It’s really our consciousness that creates the economic systems which we experience on this planet. All the natural resources on and within this planet are given to us (by God) and we then create our economic reality from our inner spiritual consciousness. Many on this planet are totally unaware of their real nature and consequently they can not discern this reality. But, nonetheless, I would submit that this is the real situation which we face.

What does this mean for the near future? To me, this means that our money systems as we perceive them will eventually collapse from the subjective manipulations of our policymakers who believe that 'symbols' and 'names' imprinted on paper or distributed electronically can save our economic systems. In reality, these 'symbols' and 'names' will reveal our core problem...which is spiritual in nature.

What will prevail after the coming storm? Yes, gold and silver and other real commodities will prevail...but their value will be determined by the subjective consciousness of human beings. Personally, I would suggest that when this storm is over, we use these metals (gold and silver) as ingredients to pave the streets on this planet. This would result in a beautiful conscious experience as we drive around this planet. We could pave our streets with gold and silver. And we could imprint all the money 'symbols' and 'names' at the stop sign crosswalks as we finish the paving process. This would remind us of our prior system and its demise.

What is the message behind all this? The message is that we live on a planet with lots of natural resources and a universe with unlimited potential. However, it's our inner consciousness which really creates the eventual economic system which we desire. What we experience today lacks the reality which is coming as we all become aware of our inner spirit body (consciousness). That's my premise. Let's see what happens!

P.S. Our money today says: One Nation under God. This motto needs to change to 'One Planet under God' ...indivisible, with liberty and justice for all!
